In my career, I have had the fortune of seeing several great institutions of higher learning at work, but none has given me more satisfaction than Embry-Riddle. Of all the places I have worked and served, there is no place I would rather be.

I could literally list hundreds of reasons why I love Embry-Riddle, but the first that comes to mind is the people who support this great university with their time, talent and treasure. Whether faculty, staff, alumnus, corporate partner or friend, your generous support shows that you share our passion for being the best aviation and aerospace university on the planet.

It is that unity of purpose and passion that has placed us on top and will keep us there for many years to come.

With your help, we have begun the important work of building a new legacy of education and discovery at Embry-Riddle. We have always been a great institution of applied learning; now, we are taking the next steps to become a place that provides new knowledge to solve real-world problems:

- We have added 66 new faculty across our three campuses, deepening our talent pool of researchers and teachers;
- We are adding new facilities at all three campuses to boost our capacity for innovation and discovery;
- We have invested our resources wisely and grown our endowment to $92 million, up from $81 million in the previous year;
- We have continued to reduce our debt while producing strong margins to fuel future growth.

We have come a long way in just the past year, but it is only the beginning. The signs for the coming year point to more good news: Admissions are up at all three campuses, Moody’s recently upgraded our bond rating from baa2 to baa1, and our endowment is approaching $100 million. We are clearly a university on the rise.

We recognize that we couldn’t do any of this without the ongoing support and dedication of the many names listed in this Annual Report on Philanthropy. Our strong position today is not the result of one person’s effort, but is the culmination of the collective efforts of all who love Embry-Riddle.

Please accept this report as a celebration of the special place you occupy in our Embry-Riddle family—and thank you for all you do for Embry-Riddle.

With sincere appreciation,

John P. Johnson, Ph.D.
President and CEO
As the world’s oldest, largest and most prestigious university specializing in aviation and aerospace, Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University attracts students from all corners of the globe. Our student population has grown more diverse and inclusive over the past few decades. But there are still plenty of bright, motivated and passionate students who are unable to realize the first-rate, unique educational experiences at Embry-Riddle without financial assistance.

In the past year at the Daytona Beach Campus, at least 23 students withdrew because of financial difficulties. The Prescott Campus lost 50 students for the same reason. While these numbers may seem small, we may never know who among these students would have been the next Ronald McNair, Albert Einstein or Sally Ride. One student lost because of financial difficulties is one student too many.

I believe that philanthropy is first and foremost an investment in human potential. When we give, we invest in a vision of what is possible in ourselves, a vision of what we would like to achieve and who we would like to become. We invest in dreams that we believe will make the world a better place. You believe this as well, which is why you make an investment in their dreams year after year. Thank you. In the 2012–13 academic year, 500 students received more than $1.3 million in scholarship funds. In the pages that follow, three of these students discuss how scholarships are helping them achieve their dreams; others express their gratitude in quotations woven throughout the report.

While scholarship support is crucial, there are a number of other ways to support our students. For example, alumnus Jeff Knittel ’80, DB) and his wife, Kathy, created the C. Jeffrey and Katherine Knittel Endowed Book Fund, which provides funding to qualified students to help defer the cost of textbooks. Understanding the critical role of faculty, University Trustee Louis C. Seno Jr. and his wife, Christine, stepped forward, as well; they set a new standard by establishing our first-ever donor-funded professorship: the Christine and Louis C. Seno Professorship in Aviation Finance.

Gifts from alumni and friends of the university are also helping to rehabilitate the performance aircraft used by our national champion Golden Eagles Flight Team at the Prescott Campus. The upgrades will allow the Golden Eagles, who have a long history of success, to continue to compete at the highest level.

Clearly, we are making great progress and our University continues to enjoy success. Today we offer more educational opportunities than ever before, strengthened by new graduate programs and industry partnerships. We are investing in state-of-the-art buildings and infrastructure to ensure we have the best facilities to foster top minds. We are leading the way with new research and innovations in aerospace, aviation and space technologies.

There is no disputing that Embry-Riddle is a great University. With a focus on building endowments for faculty and student support, leveraging donor investments to match the University’s investment in new facilities, and growing our alumni giving rate, I believe we can (and will be) even greater.

The challenges we face are a distant second to our potential. No, we won’t conquer them all in a year or even in five years—but, with your continued support, we will reach our potential and set new standards for innovation and achievement in aviation and aerospace.

Again, thank you and I welcome your suggestions and feedback. Feel free to contact me at bernadine.douglas@erau.edu.

Sincerely,

Bernadine Douglas, CFRE
Vice President of External Relations
In fiscal year 2013, Embry-Riddle raised $4,250,988 in support of students, faculty, programs and facilities.

With the rising costs of financing an education, Embry-Riddle donors answered the challenge with continued generous support of students, contributing nearly $2.5 million toward scholarships and fellowships.

Fiscal year 2013 also marked another solid year in building our capacity for growth and innovation. Contributions to support facilities, equipment, faculty and academic programs totaled nearly $1.3 million, helping ensure that the university’s ongoing investments to expand its educational and research capabilities remain strong and on track.

In other positive news, the university’s endowment closed the fiscal year at nearly $92 million, a gain of $11 million from the previous year.

“Not only has school been a great inspiration and motivation in challenging me to be a better person; it has been a great life example to my son.” — Rachel Bort, Embry-Riddle Worldwide Campus student

STAYING ALOFT
STUDENT JUGGLES PARENTING, SCHOOL AND WORK TO ACHIEVE SUCCESS

For Rachel Bort, finishing her degree and becoming the first college graduate in her family isn’t enough. “I’m trying to graduate with honors,” says the Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University Worldwide student and single mother living in Houston, Texas. “I tell my son, ‘If you’re not going to do it well, then don’t do it at all.’”

Bort, who is earning her bachelor’s degree in technical management, is a two-time recipient of the D. Keith Mosing Family Scholarship. A 1997 graduate of Embry-Riddle, Mosing is the chairman and CEO of several companies, and he and his wife, Alice, are strong supporters of education.

Bort says she was honored to receive the scholarship award, which relieves some of the financial pressure she has shouldered since starting her degree five years ago.

It hasn’t been easy studying while simultaneously working full time and raising her son, Ben, who is now 11 years old. But with graduation looming at the end of the year, she says it has been worth the struggle. “Between work and schoolwork, there is not a lot of free time,” Bort says. “But you have to just step back, prioritize it and tackle it.”

Bort has shown the same determination in her career. In 2011, the elimination of the space shuttle program required her to shift industries. After years of working on NASA’s Space Station and Constellation programs in scheduling and cost risk management, she took a job in the oil and gas industry. She now works for Tepco, LLC, a contractor for Chevron.

She hopes her perseverance serves as a positive role model for her son. “Not only has school been a great inspiration and motivation in challenging me to be a better person; it has been a great life example to my son,” Bort says. “I’m hoping he learns that motivation, determination and hard work can get you anywhere you want to go.”
"Right now the students are flying Cessna 150s with no means of electronic navigation. It’s just a compass and window."

GOLDEN EAGLES PRESERVATION
DONORS RALLY TO UPDATE AGING AIRCRAFT

Thanks to a group of dedicated donors, Embry-Riddle Prescott’s nine-time national champions, the Golden Eagles flight team, will soon have upgraded performance aircraft to ensure their continued success and safety.

Friends and alumni, some of whom are former members of the Golden Eagles themselves, have come together to create the Golden Eagles Flight Team Aircraft Enhancement Fund.

John Thelan, whose son Chris was a member of the 2008 Championship Golden Eagles Team, was one of the first to support the effort. “From talking to my son, the team members really prefer the older planes because they ‘just fly better’ and go ‘where you plant them,’” Thelan says. “There’s quite a legacy and heritage wrapped up in Eagle One and Two. It’s important to maintain [that].”

Over the next two years, the fund will provide updated navigation/communication systems as well as important safety inspections for the two aircraft. Flight team members and coaches hope the fund will continue to grow to supplement the costs of future improvements.

“It’s a long-term plan,” says Golden Eagles Head Coach Chris Dolly (’05, PC). “Our goal in the short term is to install new Nav/Comm radios, including ADS-B and GPS. Right now the students are flying Cessna 150s with no means of electronic navigation. It’s just a compass and window.”

The fund will also help pay for newly mandated manufacturer inspections. The 1965 Cessna 150s have been classified as “legacy aircraft,” which require supplemental inspections for corrosion and fatigue, says Jerry Kidrick, chairman of the Prescott Campus Flight Training Department.

While expensive and time consuming, Kidrick says investing in the tried-and-true Eagle One and Eagle Two is well worth the expense. “The aircraft have unique handling and flight control systems that make them very competitive,” he says.

Continuing the Golden Eagles’ tradition of winning the National Intercollegiate Flying Association’s annual Safety and Flight Evaluation Conference is a plus, but Dolly says the real value of the aircraft upgrades is a safer and more practical learning environment for students.

“The team skills and leadership the students gain from participating on the team is unparalleled,” he says. “We have sports teams at Embry-Riddle, but it’s not quite the same. The flight team is more applicable to what they’re training to do here and in their future careers.”

Louis C. “Lou” Seno Jr. (H ’07, DB) knows dollars and cents—and he knows aviation. So when he and his wife, Christine, learned about the new Master of Science in Aviation Finance degree at the Daytona Beach Campus, they cashed in on the opportunity to establish the university’s first privately funded professorship.

“We were at a time in our lives where we wanted to do something more substantial here,” Seno says. “The new program really touched home for me; it connects my involvement in the industry with my contributions to Embry-Riddle.”

Seno has had a lifelong connection with aviation. Since he was 6 years old, he has made the annual pilgrimage to the Experimental Aircraft Association’s Fly-In Convention (now known as EAA AirVenture Oshkosh). He attended his 59th consecutive EAA gathering this past summer.

Seno’s love of business, particularly finance, runs a close second to his interest in aviation. He spent more than 30 years in the aircraft finance business, and then became president and CEO of Jet Support Services Inc. (JSSI), a company he co-founded. He currently serves as chairman emeritus for JSSI.

With a lifetime’s worth of aviation and business in his column, Seno is mindful of the important role finance plays in the industry. “Because finance has so many touchstones, it’s a medium that links a lot of other parts of aviation,” he says.

The Christine and Louis Seno Professorship in Aviation Finance will help launch the new M.S. in Aviation Finance program, debuting this fall, by funding the activities of a distinguished faculty member. One of the professor’s first goals is to seek and acquire an endorsement from the Chartered Financial Analyst Institute, a global association that sets the standard for excellence and credentials for investment and finance professionals.

Seno believes the new program will play an important role in advancing Embry-Riddle’s College of Business in the eyes of industry. “Embry-Riddle is known for flight training and engineering, but this program will really set us apart on the business side,” he says.

Seno is a former member of the President’s Advisory Council and an honorary alumnus of Embry-Riddle and has served as a member of the Board of Trustees since 2009. He and Christine are also members of the Embry-Riddle Legacy Society.

“Something had to give and that scholarship afforded me the opportunity to quit my part-time weekend job and focus on school and my kids.” — Tom Leick, Embry-Riddle Prescott Campus student

WORKING TOWARD A BETTER FUTURE

With a full load of classes, two young children and a part-time job at a local bar, Tom Leick sometimes struggled to find the three to four hours a night that he needed to stay on track with his studies.

That’s why Leick was thrilled to receive a Cobham Aerospace Communications scholarship, which has given him and his family a needed reprieve.

“Something had to give and that scholarship afforded me the opportunity to quit my part-time weekend job and focus on school and my kids,” says Leick, who plans to graduate in May 2015 with a degree in electrical engineering.

Leick spent years working in construction, before deciding to return to school after the recession hit. He took courses at a local community college, and then discovered and applied for Embry-Riddle’s electrical engineering program.

When he’s not attending classes, he helps care for his son, Logan, 7, and daughter, Lexa, 2, with his wife, Jessica, a nurse who works nights and weekends. As a nontraditional student, Leick figured he didn’t stand a chance for a scholarship, since he’d be competing against younger students who were involved in a long list of extracurricular activities. “I was totally shocked when I got it,” he says.

Better yet, the scholarship led to Cobham Aerospace Communications offering him a paid summer internship in Prescott. While working for the company, he received valuable hands-on learning and discovered an interest in radio frequency and wireless communication engineering.

Although he’s always enjoyed his studies, Leick says it has been frustrating to have so little time for his wife and children. This scholarship changes that dynamic and makes the road to graduation seem much more manageable.

“It helped that whole education, income and family equation, and tipped the balance more towards family and education,” Leick says.
“Kathy and I established the endowment fund because without Embry-Riddle, I would not be where I am today. It gave me a step up in aviation, and we believe wholeheartedly in passing it on.”

— C. Jeffrey Knittel ('80, DB), President of CIT Transportation Finance

GIVING BACK ONE BOOK AT A TIME

When Jeff Knittel ('80, DB) arrived at Embry-Riddle’s Daytona Beach Campus to pursue a Bachelor of Science in Aviation Management, he and his parents had carefully calculated and prepared for the costs of tuition and board. But they had forgotten one important thing: books.

“We didn’t have a lot of extra money back then. Everything we had saved was going toward tuition and housing,” Knittel says. “When I got to school and realized that books were an extra cost and that they weren’t given to you, it was a pretty big shock. I scraped the money together and worked part-time jobs to help.”

Now, as president of CIT Transportation Finance with management oversight for five groups—Aerospace, Business Aircraft, Transportation Lending, Rail and Maritime Finance—Knittel credits Embry-Riddle for laying the foundation for his career success.

“In high school, I was not as focused on studying, but I went to college and got serious, and it paid off. Doing well at Embry-Riddle gave me the confidence to succeed and to compete in the job market,” he says. His experience at Embry-Riddle also deepened his fascination and appreciation for aviation. “There are few people that go to Embry-Riddle who don’t love aviation. It was nice to have a built-in brotherhood and sisterhood of friends who shared the same passion,” Knittel says.

Inspired by his experience as a student, in 2005, he and his wife, Kathy, created the C. Jeffrey and Katherine Knittel Endowed Book Fund. The fund provides vouchers to qualified students to help defer the cost of textbooks.

“Kathy and I established the endowment fund because without Embry-Riddle, I would not be where I am today. It gave me a step up in aviation, and we believe wholeheartedly in passing it on,” he says.
EVERY DREAM MATTERS
GLENN MULLARY JR.

every dream matters

Glen Mullary Jr.
“I’m the first Mullary that’s ever completed college. My family is definitely coming for graduation.”

— Glenn Mullary Jr., Embry-Riddle Daytona Beach Campus student

FINISHING FIRST

Glenn Mullary Jr.’s love of flying began when he was a kindergartner, taking his first ride in a Cessna bush airplane in the skies above New Jersey. “I’ve always known I wanted to do something with airplanes,” he says. “It was just so much fun flying around up there and such a rush.”

As a teen, his dreams of becoming a pilot morphed into an interest in aerospace engineering. He’d talk to high school friends about aerospace and get blank stares; but at Embry-Riddle, he found a place where his peers understood and shared his passion.

As an aerospace engineering student at Embry-Riddle’s Daytona Beach Campus, Mullary has excelled. He spent the past summer testing a fully electric aircraft motor at the university’s Eagle Flight Research Center, and is working now on a fuel transfer system project with professor Sathya Gangadharan for Virgin Galactic.

But financially, it has been a struggle for Mullary and his family. His father, who suffered a spinal cord injury and is permanently disabled, sold his handicap-equipped van in 2011 to help fund his son’s tuition. This past summer, finances got so tight that his dad was considering selling his three-wheeled motorcycle to help out his son, but Mullary rejected the idea.

“That’s my dad’s last bit of joy,” he says. “If he sold that, I wouldn’t feel right.”

Set to graduate in December, Mullary was ready to take a semester or two off to work to try to save up the needed tuition. Then in July, he was awarded a Daytona Beach Patrons’ Fund Scholarship, which closed the financial gap.

“If I hadn’t gotten that, I would have had to magically find that money,” he says. “It definitely puts my parents’ minds at ease that I am able to finish the semester.”

The assistance also means Mullary won’t have to delay his dreams of becoming an aerospace engineer, which is something that makes his father extremely proud.

“I’m the first Mullary that’s ever completed college. My family is definitely coming for graduation,” he says.
