Charles Eames, famed architect and designer, once said: “Recognizing the need is the prime condition for design.”

James D. Raisbeck, featured on our cover, illustrates this principle perfectly with his historic gift to establish the first-ever endowed chair in Design/Build/Test Engineering at our Prescott Campus.

An accomplished engineer himself, Raisbeck has spent the latter part of his career recognizing the need to “design and build” inspirational opportunities for future engineers.

In that same spirit, Embry-Riddle has been hard at work as well, designing and building an unmatched educational experience for our students for 90 years.

And as those decades affirm, we’ve stood the “test” of time. Our success is proven, both by the generations of productive and successful alumni who have used their degrees to shape our industry, and by donors, like you, who have shared in our grand design to build the world’s premier aviation and aerospace university.

The blueprints for our current and future success are written on the pages of this Annual Report on Philanthropy. Your inspiring stories of generosity and commitment ensure that Embry-Riddle will continue to be the place where students come to make a difference in the world of aviation and beyond.

On behalf of the entire university family, I want to thank you for your vision, your commitment and your investment in Embry-Riddle and its students. Together, with your support, we will continue to design and build a university that inspires our future generations to lead through innovation.

Sincerely,

John R. Watret, Ph.D., FRAeS
Interim President
On April 25, 2015, Embry-Riddle commemorated the 50th anniversary of its historic move from the Miami Campus to Daytona Beach, Fla. Accomplished with the help of labor and contributions from Daytona Beach service organizations, businesses and members of the community, the move, known as “Operation Bootstrap,” was the catalyst for Embry-Riddle’s future growth. Today, Embry-Riddle is a global university whose footprint, students, and alumni reach around the world.

As we celebrate our accomplishments, it’s necessary to recognize the role philanthropy has played in helping this university become a world-class leader in aviation and aerospace education. The spirit of giving that started with “Operation Bootstrap” set in motion a valuable tradition that has grown exponentially over the years to help sustain Embry-Riddle as it added facilities and expanded westward to Prescott, Ariz., and worldwide. Over the last fiscal year, Embry-Riddle supporters donated more than $7.3 million to assist students and faculty, and build programs and facilities.

James Raisbeck led the way with more than $1 million to establish an endowed chair and support the new STEM Education Center at the Prescott Campus, ensuring that Embry-Riddle engineering students will receive first-rate, hands-on learning experiences (see page 10).

Other donors created scholarships to help our students soar, like Adan A. Magana III (’15, PC), who founded the Craig Nelson Pay it Forward Scholarship for veterans, named in memory of a fallen fellow soldier (see page 8); and longtime contributors Albert “Al” and Toni Helfrick, who established an endowed scholarship for electrical engineering students and for those who perform in the Embry-Riddle Pep Band (see page 14).

Whether you are one of our nearly 120,000 alumni or a friend of the university, it’s never too late to get involved and make a difference. In 2016, Embry-Riddle marks the 90th year since it began as an aircraft sales and flight training facility at Lunken Field in Cincinnati, Ohio. If you haven’t visited our campuses lately, come see some of the incredible work our students and faculty are doing and join in our 90th anniversary activities.

The possibilities for Embry-Riddle’s future are limitless. Imagine what we can do together. Thank you for your generosity and support.

Sincerely,

Christopher J. Lambert, J.D.
Senior Executive Director of Development
2015 FISCAL YEAR

Embry-Riddle raised $7,364,251 in fiscal year 2015 to support students, faculty, programs and facilities.

With more than $4.7 million given to scholarships and fellowships, the rising cost of a university education was plainly on the hearts and minds of donors. These donations help Embry-Riddle attract and retain the most talented students and help ensure a diverse campus community.

Donors also recognized the importance of Embry-Riddle’s faculty. Giving to faculty programs, which support a highly skilled professorship, advanced research and innovation, increased by 76 percent in 2015, compared to the previous fiscal year. Other areas of growth included the general and unrestricted giving category (12 percent increase) and programs and outreach (up 13 percent).

There were strong showings from corporations and foundations, which together contributed nearly $3.5 million, and from friends of the university, who gave more than $3.2 million. And, it was a banner year for faculty and staff, who rallied to contribute $166,000, up 8 percent from last year.

The university’s endowment closed the year at approximately $111 million.
Elizabeth Worsham clearly remembers when she first knew she wanted to be an engineer.

An elementary school student in Cincinnati, Ohio, she watched a FIRST® LEGO® League (FLL) team demonstrate how to program a robot to perform specific tasks. FLL introduces youth (ages 9-14) to science, technology and innovation through team competitions.

“I remember looking at that and thinking, ‘That is the coolest thing I’ve ever seen—to take something that’s just written on paper and turn it into real action,’” Worsham says.

Now a senior majoring in mechanical engineering at Embry-Riddle’s Daytona Beach Campus, Worsham’s passion for engineering has taken her to internships at the Rolls-Royce Corporation, NASA and The Boeing Company. She eventually wants to earn a doctorate, focusing her research on clean energy sources that could reduce aircraft fuel consumption.

“I want to do something where I can really make a difference and create new technologies,” she says.

Worsham is the recipient of the Constance D. Hunter Scholarship for Women, established in 2006 to benefit female students with financial need who attend the Daytona Beach Campus. Expected to graduate with her bachelor’s degree in spring 2017, she says the scholarship not only helps her financially—it also motivates her to be and do her best.

“It makes me feel good to know that the kinds of things I’m doing are valued, and the scholarship encourages me to continue to do what I am doing,” she says.

It’s also important to Worsham to support other young aspiring engineers. She is actively involved in the Society of Women Engineers and has volunteered for years with the organization that first ignited her engineering interest: FIRST®.

“If I hadn’t been introduced to all of the things I could do in engineering, I’d have never decided on engineering as a career,” she says. “I couldn’t have gotten where I am today, without other people, so it’s my duty to help others.”
Elizabeth Worsham participated in an internship this past summer at The Boeing Company’s Everett, Wash. facility.
All things great and small are what donors support when they contribute undesignated dollars to the Fund for Embry-Riddle. These contributions pool together to create campus-specific Funds for Excellence, which finance a variety of needs that share a common purpose: helping students excel.

“Contributions can be as small as $1, but added together these dollars make a difference for the individual student experience,” says Jen Lesshafft, Embry-Riddle’s associate director of donor relations.

Lauren Barthenheier, a Prescott Campus student studying aerospace engineering, can attest to that. The Prescott Campus Fund for Excellence paid her way to the 2014 Society of Women Engineers conference, which ultimately resulted in a summer internship with GE Aviation. “It was a huge opportunity for me,” she says. “I was a freshman at the time, and there I was mingling with industry representatives and networking. If I hadn’t attended the conference, I never would have gotten the internship.”

The ERAU Motorsports club at the Daytona Beach Campus was also a beneficiary of Fund for Excellence dollars. The club, which transitioned from the Formula Hybrid to the Formula Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) competition last year, used the money to help build a new racecar. “We started from zero in August [2014],” says assistant professor of mechanical engineering and team adviser Rafael Rodriguez. “You don’t get this type of experience in the classroom,” says Mary Huval (’15, DB), former electrical systems lead for the Formula SAE car and current graduate student and adviser for the Embry-Riddle Baja SAE team. “You get to go through the whole process, from planning to design, to manufacturing and testing. Now I feel more prepared for when I get out in the real world.”

The Embry-Riddle Crew Club at Daytona Beach also benefitted from a Fund for Excellence grant. One of its racing shells was in dire need of repair, and the team needed additional dollars to allow more students to compete in the Southern Intercollegiate Rowing Association Championships. “It was a great experience, and it couldn’t have happened without the financial support of the Embry-Riddle Fund for Excellence,” says Robert Nguyen, president of the ERAU Crew Team.

Adds Lesshafft, “People give small gifts and they don’t think it matters, but it does. You don’t have to give thousands of dollars to make a difference.”
Kevin Cwik ('14, DB)
Paige Sanchez ('15, DB) and Ethan Koster ('14, DB) work on the Formula SAE racecar. Both are now pursuing graduate degrees.
dan A. Magana III ('15, PC) doesn't know why the roadside bomb in Iraq killed his friend, Louisiana Army National Guard Sgt. Craig Nelson, and not him. After all, he was exactly where Nelson had been, just weeks earlier.

“There are some debts a person can’t pay back, so he has to pay it forward,” says Magana, who created the Craig Nelson Pay it Forward Scholarship in memory of his fallen comrade. “I live with the fact that we came home and he didn’t, and there is nothing you can really do to fix that.”

The Craig Nelson Pay it Forward Scholarship will be awarded annually to a veteran student who is a senior enrolled at Embry-Riddle’s Prescott Campus.

Magana, 33, now married and an aviation systems engineer at Garmin AT in Salem, Ore., grew up with Nelson in Bossier City, La. Nelson was four years younger, but they went to the same high school and were members of the same Boy Scout Council. Their connection grew when they both joined the Louisiana Army National Guard and were deployed to Iraq in 2004. “We weren’t that close until we went to war together,” Magana says.

Nelson, 21, died in December 2004, from injuries sustained when an explosive detonated near his military vehicle in Baghdad.

“No matter how tired, exhausted, hurt and sad he was, it was his job to make everyone else smile,” says Magana of Nelson. “He would turn up crazy music and dance or tell funny jokes. No matter what the situation was, he brought joy to the entire platoon.”

On the day of the explosion, Nelson was assigned to what had been Magana’s post at their Humvee’s machine gun, so Magana could work with a surveillance unit monitoring Baghdad’s streets. Shortly thereafter, the blast went off.

“It feels like yesterday, and it feels like an entire lifetime ago,” Magana says of his time in Iraq.

In 2010, Magana enrolled at Embry-Riddle’s Prescott Campus, where he earned a degree in electrical engineering. Embry-Riddle helped ease his transition from combat veteran to civilian, he says, and the experience motivated him to help other soldiers. “I guess this scholarship was my way of encouraging other vets to look forward and find ways to make the world a better place,” he says.

It also serves as a tribute to Nelson and his ultimate sacrifice as a soldier.

“It is an attempt to hold on and an attempt to let go,” says Magana. “It is my way of making peace. I can’t pay him back—but I can move forward and help the next guy move forward.”

PAYING IT FORWARD FOR THE FALLEN
As an engineering student in the 1950s, James D. Raisbeck recalls spending more time sitting in a classroom than working on projects in the lab. “It was, ‘Sit and use your slide rule,’” says the CEO and board chairman of Raisbeck Engineering in Seattle, Wash. “My first real project-based learning experience was as an employee at Boeing.”

Raisbeck wants today’s engineering students to benefit from hands-on learning experiences much sooner than he did.
“ONE OF THE MOST EFFECTIVE LEARNING TOOLS IS PROJECT-BASED LEARNING. ITS VERY NAME IMPLIES HANDS-ON ACTIVITY.”
To that end, this past year he established the Raisbeck Engineering Design/Build/Test Endowed Chair at Embry-Riddle with a $1 million gift from the Raisbeck Foundation. Housed in the Prescott Campus’ College of Engineering, the Raisbeck Chair is the first of its kind for the college and will provide funding for a faculty member who excels in teaching design/build/test methodologies to teams of students working together on projects.

The chair is the realization of Raisbeck’s grand design to provide inspirational educational opportunities to budding engineers at all stages of their development.

In 2013, Raisbeck and his wife Sherry helped establish Raisbeck Aviation High School, an aviation-themed college preparatory school in Seattle, Wash. They have also consistently supported summer engineering camps at several universities, including Embry-Riddle.

The Raisbeck Chair provides an opportunity to carry forward the concepts of design/build/test in aircraft design to generations of soon-to-be engineers.

“This synergy of effort will ensure Embry-Riddle aerospace engineers are the best prepared to create the innovative designs of the future,” says Prescott Campus Chancellor Frank Ayers.

Hooked on Airplanes

Growing up in Wisconsin, Raisbeck was fascinated with engineering as a child, building soap box derby cars with washing machine engines. As a flight engineer in the U.S. Air Force, his enthusiasm for design shifted toward aviation.

“I was hooked, totally hooked on airplanes,” he says.

After earning a degree in aeronautical and aerospace engineering, Raisbeck worked for The Boeing Airplane Company as a research aerodynamicist and later became president and chief engineer of Robertson Aircraft. He founded Raisbeck Engineering in 1973, along with its subsidiary Raisbeck Commercial Air Group.

Raisbeck says his support for Embry-Riddle centers on the project-based, multidisciplinary education that its engineering students receive and Ayers’ strong leadership of the Prescott Campus. “Embry-Riddle Prescott’s undergraduate program stands measurably above others of its type in the way that it integrates various schools and their goals,” he says.

The Raisbeck Foundation also contributed $75,000 toward the construction of a new STEM Education Center at the Prescott
“EMYR-RIDDLE PRESCOTT’S UNDERGRADUATE PROGRAM STANDS MEASURABLY ABOVE OTHERS OF ITS TYPE IN THE WAY THAT IT INTEGRATES VARIOUS SCHOOLS AND THEIR GOALS.”

Campus, and the center’s Engineering Design Studio will be named in his honor. The state-of-the-art space will allow for hands-on, team-based capstone engineering and multidisciplinary design experiences for students. The facility is expected to open in 2016.

Raisbeck is also facilitating the donation of a Raisbeck-Engineering-designed swept blade turbofan propeller from Hartzell Propeller, which will hang on display in the STEM Education Center.

For Ayers, the sum of these gifts goes well beyond their calculable value. “James Raisbeck has spent more than 50 years solving some of the biggest challenges in aviation,” Ayers says. “With these gifts, he has made sure that future generations of engineers will be able to apply the same design/build/test concepts to transform the industry in ways we have yet to imagine. We are fortunate to have such a visionary friend.”
Embry-Riddle Faculty Emeritus Albert “Al” Helfrick enjoys improvising with his tuba when playing Dixieland jazz or with the Embry-Riddle Pep Band, but his life journey sounds more like a steady melody. As a young man, Helfrick established a life plan for himself, and his plan has uncannily played out like notes on sheet music.

“I’m one of the few people I know who had a life plan, and it worked,” he says.

Helfrick wanted to be an engineer, and he became one, dedicating more than 20 years to the manufacturing industry and eventually opening his own consulting firm.

He was passionate about music from a young age and decided then that it would always be a part of his life. It has been.

Helfrick also wanted to teach, and he did. He started instructing, writing textbooks and presenting papers as a college student in the 1960s. He continued to publish and teach at night, while earning graduate degrees and working full time as an industry engineer.

In 1992, while in Florida for a conference, Helfrick visited Embry-Riddle's campus to “check it out.” He left with a full-time teaching job. Embry-Riddle was already using his textbook: Modern Aviation Electronics.

Only then did Helfrick face a glitch in his plan. “I had always told myself that I would someday teach at a university and upon joining the faculty, I would ask to play in the band,” he says. In 1992, Embry-Riddle had no band, so Helfrick started one. Problem solved.

He recruited student musicians, purchased instruments and set up a practice room next to his office. One year later, the Embry-Riddle Pep Band played their first gig at the men's basketball opening game. “We had six or seven members at the time. It's grown to 30-plus now,” Helfrick says.

Since then, Helfrick has served as the band's adviser, its lead tuba player and its biggest supporter.

Establishing the pep band was just the beginning. Helfrick, and then College of Engineering Dean Reda Mankbadi, created Embry-Riddle's electrical and mechanical engineering departments, and helped start a tradition of hands-on learning for the College of Engineering, supporting projects like the Formula SAE motorsports.

He took his support a step further in 1999, when he and his wife, Toni, established an endowed scholarship for electrical engineering students. This year he amended the criteria for the scholarship to include eligible members of the pep band, as well.

“My wife is very charitable,” Helfrick says. “But I’m an investor. I tell my students who get the scholarship, ‘This is not a gift, it’s an investment. I want you to work real hard and make something of yourself, and in the future, you need to give back, too.’”

Helfrick, who rose to the position of chair of the electrical engineering department before retiring in May 2015, says he's pleased with his return on investment.

“What's most important to me is seeing the fruits of the scholarship, what my students have done,” he says.
Al Helfrick warms up with members of the Embry-Riddle Pep Band prior to a volleyball game. Now retired, he still performs with the pep band and teaches professional education avionics courses for engineers.
For Bryan Stevens (’04, DB), the sticker shock he received on his first day at Embry-Riddle still lingers. “I remember the stress,” he says. “After achieving the dream of being accepted, paying for the flight program was a huge barrier. That’s why I’m so passionate about giving back. I want to reduce the financial stress on new pilots.”

Now a co-pilot for Allegiant Air, three years ago, Stevens started thinking about how he could help Embry-Riddle and its flight students, and how he could rally other alumni to do the same. Recalling the World War II tradition of painting nose art on airplanes, he worked with administrators to establish the Name a Plane program, which launched last year.

With a pledge of $2,500 or $5,000, donors can emblazon the name of their choosing on the nose of a Cessna 172 or Diamond Twinstar aircraft in Embry-Riddle’s training fleet. Contributions support a number of flight programs at the Daytona Beach and Prescott campuses.

The first to name an Embry-Riddle aircraft, Stevens designated his $5,000 gift to the College of Aviation Dean’s Scholarship. “There weren’t that many scholarships when I was a student,” he says. “My mom, dad and grandparents all chipped in to help me become a pilot.”

The Name A Plane program soon caught on at the Prescott Campus, too. Frank Mayne, a retired pilot from Delta Air Lines, recently named a plane in the Prescott training fleet for longtime mechanic and Golden Eagles flight team Coach Farrell Harris. Mayne became acquainted with the Golden Eagles through his decade-long involvement with the National Intercollegiate Flying Association’s (NIFA) annual competition.

“Prescott became the apple of my eye,” he says. “I had to keep at arm’s length from the flight team, because I was on the NIFA council at the time, but I would get together with the team pretty regularly. They sort of adopted me after a while.”

After leaving the council, Mayne started supporting the Golden Eagles Aircraft Enhancement Fund, which is bringing the team’s two competition aircraft into the 21st century with new navigation and communication equipment. In honor of his most recent gift of $25,000, Mayne was offered the opportunity to name a plane. He paid it forward: “I decided that the team should name the plane,” he says. “They suggested Farrell Harris, and I was happy with that. Whoever they wanted, that’s what I wanted.”
ALL IN A NAME
Jeremy Heath Allen wants to build a bionic suit. He’s also an ex-sheriff’s deputy-turned-stay-at-home dad and a current student at Embry-Riddle’s Worldwide Campus. In addition to his studies, he homeschools his two sons, Jacob, 14, and Austin, 13, and he’s remodeling the family’s Spanish-Colonial mini-mansion.

His home and high-tech aspirations are anomalies in the rural Tennessee town of Culleoka, known more for its sprawling southern-style ranches and agricultural production than its cutting edge technology. But Allen is determined to make a difference.

After five years working in law enforcement and seeing “the bad side of people,” he returned to school to see if he could help society in a different way. “My main purpose now is to protect soldiers and save human life. I want to help them come back in one piece,” Allen says.

He’s banded together with knowledgeable family and friends to design and develop an exoskeleton that can improve soldier safety, weaponry and mobility. Currently, he’s working on developing the right energy source for the suit. The hydraulic and electrical technology is readily available, he says, but power in existing prototypes doesn’t last more than a few hours.

Recognizing his need for an advanced education, Allen turned his eyes to Embry-Riddle Worldwide. He is now pursuing a bachelor’s degree in aerospace engineering with help from the David and Andrea Robertson Endowed Scholarship. He plans to earn a master’s degree next.

“The scholarship has helped me to succeed in my classes because I don’t have to worry so much about finances,” Allen says. “It’s also encouraged me to give back. “It’s so inspiring to see people who have nothing to do with you, but who out of an unselfish and loving attitude want to help you. It’s easy to give to people we love or care about. It’s harder to give to people you don’t know.”

Allen is thankful to the Robertsons for the scholarship assistance and to his wife, Lisa, who is presently the primary breadwinner for their family; but he’s confident that their investment will pay dividends for America’s soldiers.

“Once we nail down the power core for the suit, we’ll be nearly home free,” he says. “A sustainable energy source is mission critical.”
Through their support and enthusiasm for the Embry-Riddle mission and their passion for philanthropy to the university, members of the Leadership Gift Societies continue to build the legacy that is Embry-Riddle. The Leadership Gift Societies recognize the generosity of these donors.

Alumni are listed according to the campus at which they completed their first Embry-Riddle degree.
I give because I’m an Alumnus and I want to see the Institution succeed. Among other things, I support the Eagle Flight Research Center, because this is an area where Embry-Riddle distinguishes itself. Unless research makes it to the market, it’s just a published paper. I’m a strong believer in putting theories to work, and at Embry-Riddle, that’s what they do.”

Geoff Murray (’87, DB), Senior Partner, Oliver Wyman
“I CHOOSE TO CONTRIBUTE BECAUSE I CONTINUE TO GAIN MORE APPRECIATION FOR HOW IMPORTANT MY EXPERIENCE AT EMBRY-RIDDLE WAS TO MY OWN SUCCESS AND HAPPINESS. I BELIEVE THAT HIGHER EDUCATION HOLDS THE ANSWERS TO MOST OF THE WORLD’S MOST DIFFICULT PROBLEMS, AND EMBRY-RIDDLE IS AT THE LEADING EDGE OF SOLVING MANY OF THEM.”

“MY TIME AT EMBRY-RIDDLE IN PRESCOTT WAS TRULY DEVELOPMENTAL AND TRANSFORMATIVE. THE SCHOOL’S ACADEMIC RIGOR PREPARED ME TO THINK CRITICALLY WHILE THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF OUR ILLUSTRIOUS ALUMNI INSPIRED ME TO PURSUE MY DREAMS. I GIVE BECAUSE I WANT OTHERS TO HAVE THE SAME EXPERIENCE AT EMBRY-RIDDLE THAT I DID.”

Katie Pribyl ('00, PC), Senior Vice President of Communications, Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association
