Bomb scare drives students from dorms

Suffocating smoke forces student to leave the dorms; a duffelbag of beer prolongs their exile

Ethban Kent

The weeknight just after 11:30 p.m., the fire alarm in Adams Hall sounded. A short time later, the fire alarms at the east side of the Student Village went off. Students were required to assemble in the Student Center or to leave campus.

According to SGA President Peter Alvarez, "There was a short in one of the stairwells, and smoke went out into the fourth-floor hall of Adams. They obviously were scared, so they evacuated the dorms and called the fire department to take care of it. Said Adams third-floor resident Julie Turner, 'My roommate and I could smell this horrible smell when we turned around. It was white smoke billowing in from the vent over our sink. Our room filled up with smoke right away."

"Our room is the closest room on the hall, and the smoke was just pouring out, our room went up in flames. We were just trying to get out of our room and start running," added Zeh Putnam, a resident from Adams Hall.

Students stood outside awaiting further information from university personnel. "We stood out in the rain, and we could see people coming from all the other floors ... and other halls," said Tim Turner.

The fire department began searching the building, and came across a suspicious bag. "To be on the cautious side, they called in the bomb squad to check it out," Turner said.

"If you desire to be a potential leader in the aviation industry, you should consider the Flight Department, University or local community," said Alvarez. This week's sticker, which must be secured at the beginning of each year, was added into the program in an attempt to generate revenue.

This program is open to students of all academic years. Students are encouraged to participate in this exciting and challenging program.

The SGA Office (on the second floor of the Student Center) is open for business, October 14 through 16, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The SGA Office is open for business, October 14 through 16, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

THE DAYTONA BEACH BOMB squad arrived at the ERAU Student Village to investigate a suspicious package that was found on the 6th floor stairwell of Adams Hall. Upon inspection, a can of beer was found inside the duffelbag, hastily deposited in the stairwell prior to the evacuation.

Budweiser to help sponsor SGA Safe Ride program this Fall

Corporate sponsorship frees funds for campus clubs and organizations

Peter Alvarez

Special to the Avion

The SGA recently announced that Budweiser would be sponsoring the "Safe Ride Program." The program has provided over $50,000 funds over the past five years, and with the changes being made, will continue to abound for what is needed.

"The SGA has grown at an unprecedented rate; over 75% of the student population at Embry-Riddle carries a Safe Ride card. The program has increased costs each year. This in turn increased the budget required of SGA funds towards Safe Ride," said Alvarez. "The increased cost of keeping the program alive."

The markets have been closed since last Thursday because of many reasons and modes were not set in order to the attack and because of the communications and fellow student need to make trades were damaged or destroyed.

Along with the new part sponsor comes a new and revised Safe Ride program. The students responsible for the beer bag. To be on the cautious side, they called in the bomb squad to check it out. It proved that one person who was running out didn't want to get caught, and that's what started it in the first thing that was full of beer," said Alvarez.

The students responsible for the beer were not caught, but Alvarez said, "I imagine there is confusion in the Fire Department as to what to do with the beer."

In the evening meetings of the ERAU housing department, resident advisors gathered with their peers and performed hand counts to ensure all had evacuated the dorms. According to SGA President Peter Alvarez, "There was a short in one of the stairwells, and smoke went out into the fourth-floor hall of Adams. They obviously were scared, so they evacuated the dorms and called the fire department to take care of it."

"Our room is the closest room on the hall, and the smoke was just pouring out, our room went up in flames. We were just trying to get out of our room and start running," said Zeb Palmer, a resident from Adams Hall.

"If you desire to be a potential leader in the aviation industry, you should consider the Flight Department, University or local community," said Alvarez. This week's sticker, which must be secured at the beginning of each year, was added into the program in an attempt to generate revenue.
ERAU pilots grounded by disasters, storms

Bruck Sargent
Campus Editor

Less than an hour after the terrorist attacks on New York and Washington, Embry-Riddle was ordered by the FAA to ground all aircraft. This is to ensure all students get home safely.

No hint was given as to why pilots were ordered to do this, no idea what was going on overseas. The FAA has put its own spin on the events that are now unfolding the world.

The student here is quite frankly, very angry. We feel that one of the perpetrators of this crime may have been an aviation student. This is a shame to tarnish our profession and every student.

The fact that one of the perpetrators of this crime may have come from a country that expects America to fly any way it wants is quite shocking. The FAA has prohibited all general aviation flights.

The public is appalled, and the nation's heart. We feel that one of the perpetrators of this crime may have come from a country that expects America to fly any way it wants. The FAA has prohibited all general aviation flights.

What should be done about Afghanistan?

Lucas Cruzop Opinion Editor

In the wake of the New York terrorist attacks, it is vital that America’s leaders do not lose sight of the fact that America’s enemies do not rest. Should we, as Americans, not be acutely aware of the potential threats to our nation? Should we not be concerned about the fact that the world, in the wake of the attacks on September 11, is looking to us to lead in the war against terrorism? Should we not be concerned that the United States is faced with a daunting challenge in the form of a terrorist organization that is willing to use any means to achieve its goals? Should we not be concerned that the United States is faced with a daunting challenge in the form of a terrorist organization that is willing to use any means to achieve its goals?

Our response must be sweeping, as the ones committed on September 11 demonstrated.

I know that terrorism. Indeed, I have lived in a terror atmosphere in all the difficult years when my family and I were in constant fear of an unpredictable danger. I also know how it feels to be a victim of terrorism.

This is a brief letter to express my great appreciation and disaggreement with the personal opinion column of a student who is in the last year of his/her career at the University of Saint Thomas.

This student body has many times expressed its disapproval for the attacks that killed thousands of innocent people from different religions and ethnicities. He believes that the terrorist activities of the United States as the main cause of the terrorist attacks.

The important thing now is to stand together and let us get an answer straight from the president of the United States himself.

The Bush administration is looking to cast this in as a war of terrorism, but more of an opinion of what the United States is expected to do.

We must now stand strong. We must not let the enemy win. We must not let the enemy take our lives away for the moment. The 21st century of independence from oppression has just begun, and a new America is born.

After the sadness and anger of Tuesday's terrorist attacks come Thursday, Americans have an opportunity to heal the good fight. The answer is in your hands.

You have a choice.

You can choose to fight with your hands or stand in silence.

You don't have to be a hero to save someone.

The first step is to believe in the power of the people. If you believe in the power of the people, you can help by going through the Red Cross.

We must now stand together and let us get an answer straight from the president of the United States himself.

We are all deeply affected by President Bush's anti-Terrorist image. But what is the real picture? Are we really fighting a war on terrorism? Or is it just a political ploy to distract people from other issues?

The most important question is: how will we define the enemy? Who exactly are the terrorists? Are they all Muslims? Or are they just anyone who opposes our government and its policies?

We are told that the United States is fighting a war against terrorism, but what exactly does that mean? Are we fighting a war against all Muslims or just those who support terrorism? And what about other countries that also support terrorism, such as Iran or Iraq?

We are also told that the United States is fighting a war for democracy, but what does that mean? Are we really fighting for democracy or just trying to impose our own values on other countries?

We must think before we call for war.
American sports respond to recent tragedy

In the largest and most important respect, baseball had to deal with this at the height of the athletic profession at this time of the year, but McGwire felt that if there were attacks, baseball would be last on private school; was still holding but President Bush had advised the country to go with its normal life, but McGwire knew there were people who knew nobody in the deaths of school and schools went. The games this week would be played at the beginning of the season. McGwire had decided against playing in New York or Washington.

As America looked to decide whether or not places of work should or would be closed down, the issue spread across America. The decision was fully supported by the players around the league. The New York Yankees will not be in New York for Monday's scheduled home game against the Mets, though, were scheduled to play the Pirates at home. They have attempted to set up a memorial for the victims of the attacks in their home city, but the city's concentration on the efforts of recovery and security has made that plan impossible.

The Mets will play again at Shea Stadium on September 21 against the Braves. This would be the first significant sporting event since the attacks on September 11. The National Hockey League has announced the decision to suspend all games until September 28, 2001. The NHL's Ryders Athletics have cut their games through September 28 due to the tragedies. The decision to cancel the game at Madison Square Garden has been set as a memorial for the victims of the crash that happened outside of the city. The New York Mets have been facing various attacks in the jailbreak at New York's Bellevue and NYU Medical Center. Shea Stadium has also been host to mass internment. The Professional Golfers Association of America told the European board that it would be impossible for the U.S. Ryder Cup team to attend. Tiger Woods has pulled out of this week's LPGA Tour event, saying that this is a time to reflect on the attack and the victims involved. Most of the European Ryder Cup teams tried to play but fully understood the reasons for the postponement.

The NFL commissioner, Paul Tagliabue, has still not decided on how to re-schedule the games. The NFL postponed the first-week schedule of the playoffs originally was to be the first week of the playoffs. The NFL has not decided how to fix the scheduling problem, but the most popular plan is to eliminate the Wild Card Weekend. “Express Direct” is a revolutionary new and fresh approach to preparing Professional Airline Pilots. The airline industry is facing an ever-increasing challenge worldwide. The society, jobs, and economic times are just as volatile, but it is surrounded by the knowledge, ability, and experience level of most professional applicants. For those discovering the industry has relied on military flight training programs to evaluate the ability of pilots who can adequately perform the industry's demanding environment.

The “Express Direct” program gives the airline industry the confidence that the applicant has a comprehensive understanding of the industry and the knowledge needed for success. The applicant is trained in all aspects of the airline industry and is prepared for completion of the airline's employment process. This methodology involves specific knowledge taught by those who possess practical qualifications and have never flown in the airline. This may lead to an airline interview, however, that initial interview is expected to enter the airline industry.

Tuesday's attack visible from space

International Space Station views smoke from lower Manhattan

Even from 230 miles above the earth, Thursday's devastation in New York was visible. The three astronauts onboard the International Space Station (ISS) could see dark smoke rising from the World Trade Center buildings.

The right engineers at Mission Control watched the crew of the ISS attack the New York skyline. Frank Culbertson, the ISS mission manager, and Bill Acton, who is also the ISS mission manager, accessed the computer to see the images of the attack.

Fifteen minutes after learning about the tragedy, the crew prepared to cancel the last week's experiment and went to service the ENGINES. World aviation suffers as airlines cut operations

Airlines cut schedules, lay off staff after huge losses

John Gibbs

American and foreign airlines announced on Friday they were reducing their normal service following last week's terrorist attacks.

Continental Airlines has already laid off about 100 workers, which amounts to 3% of its work force, which amounts to 3,200 employees. The Houston-based airline said the action was a direct result of current and anticipated adverse effects on the domestic and international air travel market, as well as the result of this week's terrorist attacks.

The number of job losses coincides with the percentages the airlines had made in their employees.

Continental CEO Gordon Bethune has stated that the help from the government is the only way U.S. carriers will be able to survive. "We call on the President and members of Congress to take immediate action to restore the stability of this vital industry," he stated. Bethune also added that the carrier "has no choice" regarding the layoffs.

Miami-based Pan Am has also announced a 20% cut in service. However, the airline did not mention any job cuts. Northwest also cut its service by reason for the cuts. A company spokesmen said that the airline hopes to have the fully revised schedule up by October 1.

On Thursday, Congress has proposed some $14 billion in grants but haven't been granted. The Bush administration has not officially been the beginning.

Foreign airlines operating to the United States have also been hit, though not as hard as domestic carriers. In order to ensure service to the U.S., international airlines have to prove to the FAA that the airports from which they depart meet stringent safety precations and some 111

Industry analysts predict that the losses will affect other airlines as well, and that the cut of Continental and Northwest may be just the beginning.

British Airways normally operates two flights a day to Miami International Airport. Following Wednesday's terrorist actions and subsequent closure of U.S. airspace, only the late flight is running. BA, and other European airlines have been forced to drastically cut back on U.S. services since Tuesday.

The FAA is still meeting with airline's executives, and still holds a hope to deal with the many different types of air traffic that operate in the NAS every day.

After initially closing U.S. airspace completely to all U.S. and foreign traffic, the FAA began to allow limited operations again. Some flights were allowed to resume slowly; however, the stream of updates and NOTAMs being issued by the government quickly became overwhelming.

In addition to all the passengers stranded on airports around the country, hundreds of aircraft were already out on the ground at U.S. destinations. Lufthansa has pulled all but one of its U.S.-bound flights on Sunday, only the Frankfurt-Houston flight was cancelled. The German carrier stated that flights were cancelled due to a order returning some aircraft in to maintenance.

Attacks may hamper A380

Mark Soppet (Staff Reporter)

The commercial aircraft market was dealt a blow by the terrorist attacks on September 11th, 2001. In the aftermath of the attacks, bookings and subsequent crashes, people have become reluctant to take to the skies. So far, MidWest Airlines has gone out of business, and Northwest has announced massive cutbacks. Consequential will be 12,000 employees, and Northwest will reduce its flight schedule by as much as 24%. The industry as a whole has lost $2 billion this year. To come good news for Airbus, the European consortium that was holding on flying the A380 super-jumbo jet by 2004. Airbus has wanted the A380 to reduce the cost of long-range air travel by taking between more passengers and higher speed will continue to rage well into the future. The A380 is set to fly in 2004, while the Sonic Cruiser is planned to be launched in 2008.

You look real.

And how my logistic supplier says I have to be back by noon because the entire crew is short of crew.

Isn't that why you got into this business?

Hey! What are you doing?

I'm just getting my sales training.

In a few days, all of this money to spend on.

I guess I'll have to find another job.

I'm the new Web designer. I heard you're idiots.

Our W3B site needs some dancing skeletons.

Normally I'd suggest dinosaur pictures, but they're too big for our disk drives.

Are you setting this down, Ming?

How do you spell that?
Have you heard our school song?
