The International Bulletin of Political Psychology (IBPP) is requesting nominations for a number of Regional Editor positions. Regional Editors should (1) work and live outside the United States; (2) be fluent in English; (3) encourage IBPP submissions from colleagues, students, political activists, mass media representatives, and others; (4) facilitate the development of these submissions; and--if they desire--(5) translate IBPP Issues and articles into local languages for educational purposes. Regional Editors may wish to create their own network of editors to ensure representation of political psychology ideas from as many populations as possible. Please help make IBPP truly international. Interested parties may contact the IBPP editor via email: bloomr@erau.edu, telephone: 928-777-3837, or post: Director, Terrorism, Intelligence, and Security Studies, Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, 3200 Willow Creek, Prescott, AZ 86301, USA.

-----Contemporary Books/Journals/Articles

Baer, R. (2002). See No Evil: The True Story of a Ground Soldier in the CIA’s War on Terrorism. Crown. (This text highlights and entertainingly describes common intelligence Issues such as the human versus the technical, careerism, headquarters versus field personnel dynamics, and the roles of covert action and espionage.)

Pipes, R. (2003). The Degaev Affair. Yale University Press. (The nexus of academic and terrorist is one with historical precedent. The author (and noted historian) provides an entertaining and insightful analysis of one such case.)

Post, J.M. (2003). The Psychological Assessment of Political Leaders. University of Michigan Press. (This text describes the history and contemporary status of employing the scientific and clinical behavioral sciences to assess national leaders “at a distance.” Applications for profiling of Saddam Hussein and Bill Clinton are featured.)

Rustmann, F.W., Jr. (2002). CIA, Inc.: Espionage and the Craft of Business Intelligence. Brassey’s, Inc. (A professional exposition of business intelligence based on generalization from governmental intelligence activities.)
