Community Agreement

Thank you for joining us for part 1 of Meeting At The Crossroads: A Dialogue Navigating the Intersections Between International Education and Social Justice! I realize that we are in a more casual environment than usual, and I want to take a moment to remind us all, as international education professionals, of the NAFSA Statement of Ethical Principles. These include acting in a manner that merits trust and confidence, respecting every individual, and creating an inclusive learning and working environment. As we begin this session please maintain professional decorum in the Chat and Q&A features.

Breakout Room Discussions

(optional from 3-3:30 ET/2-2:30 CT)

In the conclusion of the chapter written by Dr. Clevenger it states. As more international educators choose to adopt a role in social justice education, there must be a formal agreement on what social justice education should look like or what learning outcomes social justice educators should teach. How do you imagine this type of educational programming on your campus? Which institutional stakeholders would you expect to lead these conversations and why?
