The alumni magazine of Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University
I am especially pleased to present the Special Report on Philanthropy for fiscal year 2007. As a recognition and celebration of your support of Embry-Riddle, this year’s report is particularly significant because it marks the most successful fundraising year in our history, with more than $10.2 million raised in total gifts and pledges.

Why this unprecedented success? Take a look at the stories in this issue and the answer becomes clear: Embry-Riddle alumni and friends are more fully engaged than ever before.

Whether it is James Hagedorn’s ('79, DB) record alumni gift to name the Aviation Complex, Harry Robertson’s invaluable ongoing support of our safety programs—or one of the many other gifts that expand and enhance Embry-Riddle’s ability to deliver the finest aviation education programs in the world—we are very fortunate to have alumni and friends who expect the best from their university and are willing to contribute to that growing legacy of excellence.

I am grateful for and energized by your generosity toward our great institution and its educational mission. It is because of your support that we remain the recognized leader in the science and business of aviation and aerospace education.

Warmest regards,

John P. Johnson, Ph.D.
President
Leading from the Front

James Hagedorn (’79, DB) pledges largest alumni gift in Embry-Riddle History

Jim Hagedorn (’79, DB) thrives on competition. From his years as an Air Force captain and F-16 fighter pilot, to his current role as Chairman and CEO of the world-leading Scotts Miracle-Gro Company, Hagedorn is driven to win in everything he does.

So when he decides to make a gift to his alma mater, it is no surprise that the gift raises the bar for philanthropy at Embry-Riddle.

In June 2006, Hagedorn, a Board of Trustees member since 2005, announced his pledge of $2.5 million to help fund construction of the Aviation Center II on the Daytona Beach Campus.

The donation represents the largest gift from an alumnus in the history of Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University.

“Jim Hagedorn’s generous commitment is yet another example of his dedication to the continuing growth of his alma mater,” said President John P. Johnson.

The next phase of the aviation complex will add two new structures totaling 95,000 square feet to the campus’ College of Aviation Building. The first building will house flight planning and dispatch areas that operate like actual airport fixed-base operations, as well as classrooms, bays for instructor pilots, and offices for faculty and staff. In the second building, a hangar will house maintenance operations for the flight training fleet, and a conjoined hangar will hold labs, offices, and equipment for the aviation maintenance science degree program.

“These new buildings will allow us to expand in a significant way and further our vision for the College of Aviation,” said Tim Brady, dean of the college.

“The addition of a second aviation building and new flight line will showcase to the world our continuing leadership position in aviation and aerospace education.”

For Hagedorn, the gift to help fund the new buildings represents an investment in the university’s greatest asset: its students.

“It’s about the students, education and developing the next generation of aviation,” says Hagedorn. “My father taught me about the importance of giving back and investing in the future. This donation to Embry-Riddle will help tomorrow’s pilots realize their dreams.”
Harry Robertson has spent most of his career making the skies safer for all. As a seasoned pilot, accident investigator and pioneer in the development and implementation of crashworthy fuel systems for helicopters, Robertson has helped save thousands of lives over the decades by understanding one vital principle: you can always learn from failure.

“Aviation safety and its future development depends on knowledge gained through detailed aircraft accident investigations,” said Robertson.

Over the years, Robertson has learned a great deal about aviation safety by studying aircraft accidents, and now, with a significant gift to expand the Robertson Aviation Safety Center on the Embry-Riddle Prescott Campus, he is passing on that invaluable information to a new generation of safety students.

As a second building to the Robertson Aviation Safety Center, this 4,500 square-foot archive facility will house thousands of unique aviation safety resources and allow the university to expand its programming to include an undergraduate program in Safety Science in 2008.

“This new facility will house a lifetime of many dedicated investigators’ documentation, photographs, and expert evaluations – ready for further study by Embry-Riddle students and faculty,” said Robertson.

The centerpiece of the archive’s holdings will be Robertson’s own collection of safety resources assembled over his many years of service to the industry. The S. Harry Robertson Aviation Archive includes over 15,000 aviation accident photographs, thousands of technical papers, accident investigation cases and a video library.

“Harry Robertson has been a champion of aviation safety for many years,” says Dr. John P. Johnson, Embry-Riddle president, “His generous contributions to Embry-Riddle have placed us at the forefront of aviation safety studies. His leadership and vision ensure that we will remain the leader in safety science for generations to come.”
On the Rise: Embry-Riddle’s Prescott Campus

Thanks to the generosity and vision of donors like Harry Robertson (facing page), Gertrude Worthington (page 23), Caroline Daniels (page 15), and others, the Prescott Campus is fast on the rise toward world-class status. Everywhere you look the campus is growing to meet the needs of students poised to lead the aviation industry of the 21st century. Here’s an update:

A New Front Door

Those who haven’t visited the Prescott Campus in a while will notice a “new front door” welcoming them in. Greeting visitors with a large, open atrium that befits the time-honored Prescott Campus warmth and personality, the new entrance and Visitors Center (pictured right) provides visitors the ideal starting point for their visit. Rising behind the Visitors Center, Academic Complex I brings students and faculty together into one vibrant academic setting.

In Step with Industry

Bringing engineering laboratories under the same roof, the Aerospace Experimental & Fabrication Laboratory (AXFAB) mimics the efficiencies and integrated design practices of today’s industry and helps build synergy between engineering students and faculty from various programs.

Bringing People and Ideas Together

Scheduled to open in 2008, the New Chris and Steven F. Udvar-Hazy Library and Learning Center (pictured right) will be the intellectual heart of the Prescott Campus, dramatically enhancing the student learning experience by using the latest technologies to bring people and ideas together.

A New Lease on Student Life

With ongoing construction on the Fred and Fay Haas Interfaith Chapel and new dining hall, Embry-Riddle students will have ample opportunities to get active in campus life.
During Fiscal Year 2007, Embry-Riddle recorded a record $10.2 million in donations, new pledges and planned and estate gifts. In step with the university’s commitment to quality growth, Embry-Riddle enjoyed significant contributions to:

- Enhance and expand its infrastructure, with over $4.2 million directed to new construction on the Daytona Beach and Prescott campuses (see Hagedorn and Robertson features for more highlights);
- Increase student support, with scholarships and fellowships totaling $1.97 million—up from $740,000 the previous year.
- Secure future investment, with deferred and planned gifts totaling $3.2 million, a 60% increase from the previous fiscal year.

On the following pages are the names and inspirational stories of those who have helped Embry-Riddle reach new heights in its campaign for the future. Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University would like to extend its sincere appreciation to all who have shown this unprecedented level of commitment.

Charting Our Course:
Embry-Riddle celebrates two of its finest

John “Jay” C. Adams and James “Jim” G. O’Connor have spent more than 60 years combined working to advance the mission of Embry-Riddle. In November 2006, many in the Embry-Riddle family came together like never before for “Charting Our Course,” a black-tie event to celebrate their legacy of leadership and service.

“These two guys have given so much of their time to help Embry-Riddle become what it is today,” said Jim Henderson, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

In recognition of all that Adams and O’Connor have given in service to and support of Embry-Riddle over the years, attendees of the gala gave plenty themselves, raising more than $500,000 to establish a new scholarship for Embry-Riddle students – the John “Jay” C. Adams and James “Jim” G. O’Connor Scholarship Fund for Student Leadership and Service.

“It’s a fitting tribute to Jim and Jay that this event raised significant support for scholarships,” said Dr. John Johnson, Embry-Riddle president. “For both of these men, it has always been about one thing: our students.”

Jay Adams, who has served in various capacities on the Board of Trustees since 1968, helped move Embry-Riddle from Miami to Daytona Beach in 1965. Jim O’Connor, a leading board member for 20 years, served 11 years as chairman and helped lead the university through some of the most challenging times for the country and the industry.

“Jim and Jay have truly made a difference,” said Dr. Johnson. “They’ve led us with enthusiasm, insight and courage.”

George Mendonca has always believed that a single event can transform a life. “If you change one thing in your life,” he says, “you can change everything.” For him, the event was the tragic loss of his father in a logging truck accident. Mendonca was only 10 at the time, but the incident changed the trajectory of his life forever. Anticipating that he’d follow his father into the lumber industry, Mendonca never expected to become a pilot, but after the accident, he turned to his love of aviation with a new determination.

“I decided then that I’d like to get into aviation somehow, especially as a pilot,” he recalls.

That early decision is a huge part of the reason Mendonca established the George Mendonca Endowed Scholarship Fund for aviation students at Embry-Riddle Prescott.

As someone who’d recently retired from a 29-year “dream career” as a pilot for United Airlines, Mendonca wanted to do something that would help young people turn their love of aviation into a learning and career opportunity. He spent a few years looking for the right place to make an impact—and then he found Embry-Riddle.

“I had looked in a lot of places that offered flight training,” he recalls, “but Embry-Riddle offered students the opportunity to get a degree, something I wanted them to do, because I never did end up getting one myself.”

In setting up the endowed scholarship, Mendonca took advantage of a special provision that allowed him to make a donation out of a traditional IRA account, which he was able to fund by rolling over resources, tax and penalty free, from his employer sponsored retirement plan.

Mendonca also made an additional contribution the first year so that Embry-Riddle could begin awarding scholarships immediately. In fact, he was able to meet two of the first four Mendonca Scholars to see firsthand how his decision to create a scholarship has changed lives for the better.

“It was very gratifying,” he says. “I’m glad to give back to aviation what it’s given me.”

Preserving aviation through education

Thanks to two Embry-Riddle alumni, Flight Training Services International (FTSI), a company dedicated to providing a comprehensive range of aviation training services, has committed $375,000 to establish the Careers in Aviation Endowed Scholarship at Embry-Riddle.

Shawn Raker ('90, DB), president of FTSI, and Jamail Larkins ('07, DB), national spokesman and board member for Careers in Aviation (the non-profit arm of FTSI), see the gift as a way to keep the dream of flying alive and well for future generations of Embry-Riddle students.

“We wanted to not only educate and inspire, but also to assist young students financially,” says Larkins. “If we can provide more opportunities for more young students to achieve their dreams in the aviation industry, then I will know we have made a positive impact in the industry, and essentially, our economy.”

For Raker, the gift also has a personal aspect. “[It’s] an opportunity for me to give back to Embry-Riddle and to the industry that have provided a great career for me. Many people helped me unselfishly and now I want to do the same for others.”

In helping students, Raker and Larkins also have a farther-reaching aim for the gift. By creating opportunities to train aspiring aviation professionals, both hope to help ensure the future of the aviation industry.

“Our efforts often point back to Embry-Riddle, as we help young people realize that a career in aviation is possible,” says Raker. “That’s why we established the endowed scholarship – to be sure everyone understands that education is an important piece in preserving this industry.”

Shawn Raker (left) and Jamail Larkins believe education is the key to a thriving aviation industry.

A natural affinity for Embry-Riddle

You wouldn’t necessarily think that an avid gardener would have a natural affinity for a world leader in aviation and aerospace education, but Gertrude Worthington is no ordinary cultivator. For more than 40 years, Worthington has been helping Embry-Riddle grow to become the world leader in aviation and aerospace education that it is today.

“I’ve enjoyed every aspect of the work being done on Embry-Riddle’s campuses, and am always thrilled to watch them grow,” she said.

True to her gardening nature, Worthington has done much more than just watch the university grow. Over her 40 years of involvement, she has played a critical role in sowing the seeds of Embry-Riddle progress, from serving on the university’s Board of Trustees for 20 years to championing the progress of the libraries at both residential campuses.

Today, with the ongoing expansion of the Prescott Campus, Worthington has stepped forward to ensure that the new Chris and Steven F. Udvar-Hazy Library and Learning Center at Prescott flourishes as the academic heart of that campus. Her substantial gift to name the Gertrude V. Worthington Reading Room will ensure that students have a place to call their own at study time.

“Gertrude’s support of our libraries is a physical reminder of what is most important to her:” said Bob Rockett, dean of the Heritage Project, “reading, learning and providing students with the highest quality of education.”

At no time was that commitment to students more evident than in December when a Christmas Day tornado ripped through the center of the Daytona Beach Campus, causing millions in damages and threatening the school year.

“One of the first envelopes I opened after the tornado was a check and hand-written note from Mrs. Gertrude Worthington,” recalled Pat Ramsey, then assistant vice president for University Development. “The check was for $100,000.”

“I was really, really sorry to learn that so much of the campus had been destroyed,” said Worthington. “I just wanted to help a little bit.”

For Worthington, helping Embry-Riddle just comes naturally. “To me, supporting Embry-Riddle is just like watching a blade of grass grow,” she said. “And like that blade of grass that came from a tiny seed, Embry-Riddle started from nothing more than one hangar building and is now a world-class university.”

“I was pleased to contribute in a small way to the massive and highly effective recovery effort conducted by Embry-Riddle University in the aftermath of last December’s tornado. The aerospace world is a small one, and it is natural for those of us with aerospace careers to want to help our alma-mater during such dire circumstances. My personal ties to the university run even deeper, because I attribute a great deal of my career success directly to the university.”

I am pleased to have joined Embry-Riddle at such an exciting and promising time. While getting to know our campuses and traveling with President Johnson during the Presidential Welcome Tour, I have had an opportunity to meet many Embry-Riddle faculty, staff, alumni and friends from around the country.

I quickly discovered a growing sense of pride and engagement among Embry-Riddle’s supporters. Clearly, the faculty, staff, alumni and friends of Embry-Riddle want to be involved with the future plans of this great institution—whether they’re coming to work each day, attending alumni or presidential events, networking online at the alumni website, eaglesNEST, or investing in our students through scholarship support.

As a private educational institution, the importance of philanthropy is crucial to our ability to grow and meet the demands of the next generation of students. Our reputation and stature as a leading provider of professionals within the industry make possible extraordinary new opportunities that can only be capitalized on with the investment of alumni and friends.

The University proudly recognizes and wishes to express its appreciation for the more than 3,000 donors that made a gift this year, totaling more than $10.2 million. Together, these donations allow us to offer a superior education and expand on our position as “The World’s Leader in Aviation and Aerospace Education.”

Every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy and completeness of our list, however, errors or omissions can occur. To report a discrepancy in the information, contact the Office of Institutional Advancement by phone at 386-226-6138 or email at Maxine.Sowinski@erau.edu.

And we’re just getting started.

Thanks to nearly 1,700 generous alumni who made a gift to support Embry-Riddle in the last year, our alumni giving rate has never been higher. In the first year of our three-year “Raise the Rate, Just Participate” campaign, Embry-Riddle alumni have risen to the challenge and taken the university to new heights.

While we’ve made great progress, there’s still a lot left to accomplish. To raise the rate by 1% in this coming year, we’ll need 2,700 alumni to make a gift of any size.

That kind of support can make a world of difference—for students and for you.

Every new alumni donor creates more opportunities for students and improves Embry-Riddle’s national reputation in the eyes of corporations, foundations and prospective students. And as we all know, the better Embry-Riddle’s reputation, the higher the value of your degree.

If you haven’t already, you will soon be receiving a letter or phone call from the Embry-Riddle annual fund asking you to join the ranks of alumni donors. We hope you will.
